

Code of Ethics

Introduction:

The code of Ethics is designed to protect the good name of the OG Canada and its Members. These standards work in concert with the Academy's Purpose:

- to establish an academy for Orton-Gillingham Practitioners.
- to develop a code of standards and ethics.
- to provide professional guidelines.
- to enhance professional development and educational opportunities within the field of services to individuals with a specific Language/Learning Difference (Dyslexia)

The Society Will:

- ensure a high quality of service through the supervision of training courses and on-going educational opportunities for Orton-Gillingham Practitioners.
- provide support and professional status for Orton-Gillingham Practitioners.
- maximize availability of specific help for individuals in need of educational remediation.
- provide Professional Liability Insurance to its members through annual membership dues

Members of the Academy Shall:

- meet the Educational/Training requirements of OG Canada and shall have successfully undergone a screening process and criminal record search as required by OG Canada standards.
- adhere to a high standard of professional conduct in their activities, consistent with the goals and objectives of OG Canada.
- endeavour to be worthy of a client's trust in the performance of professional duties.
- pursue the virtues of a trustworthy professional who is honest, candid, competent, diligent, loyal, fair and discreet.*
- respect the confidential nature of information concerning clients; treat clients with dignity, being mindful of their rights and sensibilities.
- recognize that a privileged relationship exists with students that must not be exploited for any reason.
- be willing to review with colleagues, students and parents/guardians the quality of service rendered and practices employed by the professional.
- be responsible to engage in continued professional education through workshops, conferences, seminars, college courses and programs in order to keep current with knowledge that pertains to the field of dyslexia and thus to provide appropriate advice and service to the community.
- use OG Canada membership to instill a greater sense of responsibility for social good, not merely for self-serving monopolistic purposes.
- agree that continued OG Canada membership and accreditation are contingent upon adherence to this code and that disciplinary action will be taken when a member is guilty of a criminal or moral offense or misuse of a client's good faith.

Code of Ethics for OG Canada (Formerly the Canadian Academy of Therapeutic Practitioners: Orton-Gillingham) was developed for CATT-OG by Ethics Committee Members Joan van Dyck and Miranda Deis. It was approved and adopted by the CATT-OG Board of Directors on April 23, 1999.

Revised September 12, 2012

Updated to current organisational terminology, March 23, 2023.
